Liberal Studies: A Degree Overview

The Liberal Studies major allows students to design their own plan of study. This interdisciplinary approach provides greater breadth and flexibility than is available in other major programs. Students mix and match courses from any combination of all 13 departments in the College of Liberal Arts to design their own major organized around a theme. The theme is implemented by taking classes within the College of Liberal Arts departments which include: Anthropology, Art, Economics, English (including Writing), Ethnic Studies, Foreign Languages & Literatures, History, Music, Philosophy, Political Science, Psychology, Sociology, and Speech Communication (including Theatre Arts).

Students in Liberal Studies receive a well-rounded education that prepares them for a variety of experiences and careers. Liberal Studies introduces students to diverse subject matter. In addition to this breadth of new knowledge, students will develop communication skills and the ability to think critically. Graduates who can think analytically and communicate effectively are in demand everywhere in today's job market.

As with all OSU undergraduate programs, Liberal Studies has specific degree requirements. The Liberal Studies program consists of 45 or more credits that is thematic in nature and includes at least 27 upper-division credits developed from the course offerings of two or more departments within the College of Liberal Arts. Students often include some sort of practical experiences through an internship or project as part of their major. The program of study must be approved in advance by the Liberal Studies Advisor. Students must satisfy the University Baccalaureate Core and the College of Liberal Arts Core Requirements as well. At least one Writing Intensive Course (WIC) must be completed with a grade of C or better.
